Something for the Workingmen to Remember.

It would be hardly possible to put the free trade case more clearly or more strongly. The arguments which President Cleveland uses are those which Mr Cobden used to employ forty-five years ago, and which my English free trader would employ now. They are purely free trade arguments, and as such we are very glad to see Mr Cleveland using them, though sorry for the popular infatuation which makes it dangerous to give them their right name.—London Times.

He discusses the principles at issue in the struggle and shows that he is a free trade candidate in everything but name. The reservation is an important one for American party purposes. The President feels compelled to characterize the attempt to brand him a free trader as a deception of his enemies. For all that, the electoral conflict now in progress is a conflict between free trade and protection, and nothing less.—London News.

The only time England can use a Celt is when he emigrates to America and votes for free trade.—London Times.

Attention Lumbermen!

The lumbermen of the State of Maine are not alone in their OPPOSITION TO FREE MANUFACTURED LUMBER, *as there is a strong opposition from Missouri, Kentucky, West Virginia and all the Pacific States to the placing of lumber on the free list. The high duty now collected by the Dominion of Canada upon nearly all the articles manufactured of wood should present such action by Congress. * * * Free lumber from Canada without equal advantages in return would be* A WHOLLY GRATUITOUS INJURY TO OUR OWN PEOPLE.  * * The Canadian lumberman purchases his supplies and turns at a loss and then do our lumbermen and he* HAVE LEFT THE LABOR.—Bangor Commercial, February, 1886.

The Farmers Did Not Respond.

The farmers will be here in force, quite gates, both, etc., were represented, but until the train from the West arrived the crowd was not forthcoming. This simply shows that the farmers of Penobscot county and Eastern Maine generally are not looking to any extent with the party that would subject them to free competition with Canada. The Democratic policy of free wool and protected rice, free lumber and protected sugar, is not likely to enthuse Maine farmers who very naturally refused to march in procession going up to boom the party which has the destructive Mills bill on its platform. The "barbecue" has come and gone, but the determination of the people of Eastern Maine to bury the free trade party this fall is just as strong as ever. Street or will not save it from the condemnation which its attack upon the protective system justly merits.

It Hurts.

There is no one thing that hurts our Democratic friends more just at the present time when they are trying to hedge on the tariff question, than the outspoken championship of the Cleveland free trade policy in the British press. First they tried to discredit it by claiming that the English journals favored free trade in this country simply to prejudice the people against it, fearing that the United States would usurp England's position in the "markets of the world." This was so supremely gassy that the ridiculous assertion was quickly abandoned and now the cry goes up that the extracts from the London journals are "forgeries!" Such a statement is a little more foolish if anything than the previous attempt to break the damaging force of this free trade indorsement. The more our friends, the enemy, diggle the deeper they get in the mire. Their frantic efforts to discount their more truthful brethren in England only serves to show their appreciation of the unpopularity of the Cleveland free trade policy. They may protest as much as they please and try to belog the issue, which, but a short time ago they pretended to be so eager to take to the people for settlement at the polls, but the all important fact remains perfectly clear to the intelligent voters that the issue is between Republican protection and Democratic free trade. Torchlight processions, roast steer and a dollar a head from Lewiston to Bangor and return will not induce the people of this state to give their support to the free trader, free wool and fishery surrender party.

Lost Opportunity.

Yesterday would have been a good time for our free trade contemporary to enlighten the assembled Democrats on the beauties of a bill that puts Maine lumber and wool on the free list, reduces the duty on starch to a point that would close every factory in Aroostook county, and refuses to afford any encouragement to the box shook industry; while at the same time it places a duty of 100 per cent on Southern rice and 68 per cent on Southern sugar. It failed to grasp the opportunity, however, so that our friends, the enemy, must return to their homes with the conviction that the Democratic policy as regards Maine is so disastrous to our every interest that even the party organ in this city is afraid to stand sponsor for it. This is indeed a bad condition of things.

Indiana Governorship.

Colonel Dudley, Treasurer of the National Committee, has returned to New York from a two days' visit to Washington. He stated that he found everybody there in the best of spirits over the prospects. The Congressional Committee is hard at work, and lots of pamphlets are sent out daily. Most of the literature is on the tariff as all the demands are for it. Both committees are working in full harmony and according to a definite plan. Speaking of ex Governor Porter's retirement from the Indiana gubernatorial campaign Colonel Dudley said:

It is as easy matter to understand Governor Porter's candidacy and a conceded one. He never was a candidate in the ordinary sense, but would have taken the nomination for Governor had it come to him unanimously. He is a strong man with the people, and we naturally wanted him, but with success practically assured to the party other contestants have appeared in the field each claimed that a convention means election. Mr Porter could not enter into a contest for the place, and so he has withdrawn. It leaves a free field for everyone, with no bitterness as long as the nominee. The contest is purely a friendly one. The talk about a split is nonsense. I have just finished reading a letter from General Hubbard dated Saturday morning, in which he tells me of Porter's withdrawal, and says that the party never had better prospects of carrying the State on both national and local issues. You can depend on it that if we were not united and on the road to victory in Indiana, there would not be so many rivals for what would otherwise be an empty honor.

The Jersey Stampede.

Another Democratic politician of Elizabethport N. J., has come out unsatisfactorily for Harrison and Morton and protection. This time it is Patrick Donahue, a contractor, who employs a large number of laborers. In an interview with a reporter Mr Donahue said:

"It is perfectly true that I shall vote for Harrison. I am done with Cleveland absolutely because I do not believe him to be a true Democrat. If he who he never would have written that English free trade manifesto of his. Besides, his behavior during the four years he has occupied the White House has been anything but Democratic as I understand Democracy. I have been a Democrat all my life and voted for Cleveland in 1884 because I thought he was a good man, but I fail to see where the party comes in. I honor a straight man and was Republican or any man who is not afraid to show his true colors, but I despise a hypocrite such as Cleveland has proven himself to be. Free trade stands not a ghost of a show, because the American people will not have it. Yes, indeed, there are many Democrats who will vote as I intend to Republicans, and I could give you their names, but you will hear from them in November. There are eight votes gained for Harrison under my roof alone. It is my opinion that the thinking Democrats are heartily ashamed of the present administration and Cleveland will know it in November."

Mr. Donahue is a well known contractor and for years has been the political boss of the First Ward, which is in the heart of the manufacturing district of the city.

Pertinent Questions.

If the tariff on wool—68 per cent—is "robbery," as the Democratic claim, what is the tariff on sugar—which is 68 per cent?

If the tariff on wool is robbery, what is this tariff on rice, which is 100 per cent?

If the object of the Mills bill is to reduce the revenue by reducing the tariff, why not reduce the tariff on sugar, which

The Field Bridge.

Representative Foran (Dem.), of Ohio, says that he anticipates that Ohio will be Republican both in State and politics. He expects that his own district and Mr. Campbell's or Odell's will be lost to the Democrats. The latter, he says, will lose New Hampshire, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Iowa and Nebraska, gaining nowhere but in Virginia and possibly in Mr. Johnson's Congressional District in Indiana. Representative Burrows, of Michigan, and White, of New York, say that Cleveland and Thurman will not carry a single Northern State. The "Brown Dispatch" of Mr. White being great pleasure in trying himself, declared that Harrison will carry the state of New York by not less than 50,000.

California Workingmen for Protection.

It is only the misinformed or the resolutely boastful among the Democratic papers which express any expectation of winning votes on the Pacific coast. The drift there toward protection is very strong, as the Oregon election plainly showed. The San Francisco Bulletin prints a letter from George A. Rankin, President of the Candy Makers' Union, in which he says:

"We, the candy makers, are not afraid to come out and declare ourselves for home industry and protection. The Knights of Labor of this State have done likewise, and the first and other workers also. Times are hard, and the fight has not begun as yet. Can the Boot and Shoemakers' White Labor League declare itself for free trade? Can the iron workers go in for free trade? I will give you a motto that is known all over the United States, viz: 'An injury to one is the concern of all.' All labor unions, Knights of Labor organizations and federal trade unions, do know full well that it is impossible for the working class to compete with the cheap labor of England. We have been fighting the Chinese question here for years. Free trade cannot solve the question in China as well as here. We, the candy makers, will stick to the old flag. 'Protection and home for home.' Our motto is: 'Home industry and protection.' No free trade for the Candy Makers and Helpers' Union."

They Are For Protection.

One of the most noticeable evidences of the desertion of workingmen from Cleveland to Harrison was given at Buffalo, Saturday, when 175 voters employed by Schoellkopf & Co., sheepskin and morocco dressers, paraded with Harrison flags on their way to the steamer which took them down river on their annual excursion. Every man, there foreman said, was a supporter of Cleveland four years ago, but they are now for Harrison without an exception.

Colonel Alexander McClure, editor of the Philadelphia Times, said, two years ago, that "free coalers and free trade would follow free wool just as tadpoles follow frogs follow tad-poles." So they will. What does Brother McClure propose to do about it.—Inter-Ocean.

Paid $50 a Salute.

A BEECHER MANUFACTURER WHO CALLS A SPADE A SPADE.

(From the San Francisco Chronicle.)

When W. H. Perkins, who has recently returned from a European trip, was called at the Hotel Oxford what he had noticed about free trade in Europe, he said:

"While in Brussels Belgium, last summer, I saw some skilled laborers making spiral steel car springs, such as we use on our freight cars. They received 60 cents per day, while our blacksmiths receive 60 for the same work. I asked the Belgian proprietor why he didn't pay more. He said, "I am handicapped. When I get $100 worth of car springs into the New York harbor (for I sell my car springs in America) I have to salute your Yankee flag and give up $50."

"Where does that come from?" I asked. "It comes off of my men's wages," he said.

"But suppose America had free trade?" "Free trade!" he exclaimed. "Why, I would flood the Yankees with car springs. I would double my works to-morrow."

"But, suppose that break our steel car spring makers up?" I asked.

"Then, for a while—"

"How long?"

"Why, till your men worked for 60 cents per day, as our men do."

"But there are patriotic men in America," I said, "who advise the laboring men to vote for this same free trade."

"And the men, boys?"

"Some ignorant men do."

"Well," said the Belgian manufacturer, "instead of listening to a demagogue who would decrease their high wages down to the wages of our poor people, your American laborers ought to drive such a demagogue out of the country."

A Morsel for Colored Democrats.

(Letter to Cincinnati Commercial, Rep.)

I inclose a Democratic ticket that was voted in Tuscarawas County in '67, when Thurman was candidate for Governor on the "White Man's" ticket. If enough of such tickets had been cast in the Northern States, that little gathering of colored men at Indianapolis the other day would have been spared the necessity of meeting to decide what ticket to vote this fall. They wouldn't have any vote to cast. Here is the ticket:

DEMOCRATIC,
WHITE MAN'S TICKET.
IN FAVOR OF EQUAL TAXATION.
On Constitutional Amendment (giving Negroes the right to vote and hold office.)

DONTS.

The Oldtown Enterprise contains a vast amount of good advice in the following paragraphs which it kindly offers:

Don't foolishly imagine that because you are in good health to-day you will alway remain so.

Don't be so foolish as to imagine that the money or wealth which is going to come with your rich uncle's death is your property.

Don't imagine that your neighbor is a fool because he does not agree with you on politics, the tariff, or the rebellion.

Don't imagine yourself to be personified that the earth, with its silver dime you cast carelessly before, is by any means a substitute for the honest dollar.

A FILTHY

The Wonderful Mand S

NEW YORK, Aug 1 There seems to be no limit to the possibilities of Mand S The Queen of the Turf has often astonished her admirers by surpassing her own best time Her latest feat was Monday, when on the Fleetwood track, driven by John Murphy, she made the mile course in 2 12¼, equal to the best time ever made in Fleetwood by any other trotter To be sure, the great mare had on the previous Monday made the mile on the same track in 2 12¼, but the wonderful part of the last trial was the fact that in obedience to instructions Murphy eased her in coming up the hill so that her speed was perceptibly checked But she, been pushed there is no doubt about her ability as the terrible rate she was going to have done the mile several seconds quicker than 2 11½ and beaten her own record. The mile in 2.12¾ was the second that day, the track having been circled the first time in 2 14¼. Her time by quarters in the two miles had been as follows

	First Mile.	Second Mile.
Quarter,	0 32	0 32½
Half,	1.03½	1 04
Three quarters,	1 40½	1.36½
Mile,	2 14¼	2.12¾

"The Fleetwood record of Maud S," said Mr Bonner, "before I bought her from Mr Vanderbilt was 2 18 and her fast track record made at Cleveland was 2 08¾. Since then she has done a second better for me also at Cleveland three years ago. She is a little fat yet and has only been driven five times to-day this season. She may break her own record before the season is over, but I haven't decided yet what I am going to do with her."

GEN. SHERIDAN.

A Most Gratifying Bulletin.

MONTEREY, Mass., Aug. 1. Dr. Kelly has arrived from Washington and relieved Dr. Bainbridge and has issued the following bulletin!

"8 P. M.—Gen. Sheridan was last seen by me at the afternoon of the 8th of July, the day after the dismissal letter from the Secretary. On resuming to-day my duty as attending physician I note the following changes which have occurred since that date: The General's whole appearance is better, all his color more natural. His eyes are brighter and have more expression. His face is fuller and, judging from this and from the contour of his limbs, he has gained in weight. His pulse is 90, of good volume and tension and perfectly regular.

His respiration has increased in depth and evenness. He is taking more food and his cough is easier and less frequent. His mind is more active, perception clearer, and nervous and muscular system more decidedly able to resist fatigue. To sum up these observations indicate improvement in all General Sheridan's functions The change has been so gradual as to be hardly perceptible from day to day, but in a period of three weeks the gain is manifest

MASSACHUSETTS

The Collector's Statement.

PITTSFIELD, Aug 1 Tax Collector Frost returned this afternoon from Sharon Springs, accompanied by his wife and child He went to the news room, bought files of newspapers containing the accounts of his trouble and then went directly to his office. He says the whole trouble emanated from a man who had professed friendship for him, but who has been stabbing him behind his back for the last two months. He named two of the three selectmen as being near the bottom of the whole thing, stating that they are jealous of his political prominence, success and talent and have done all they can to knife him He insists that they took advantage of his absence to spread the news of his alleged defalcation and adds that they have been trying for the past fortnight, to get the newspaper men to ventilate him publicly

He said he could have settled two months ago if he had wanted to, but did not propose to be forced by the selectmen, assessors or anybody else He said all the documents, memoranda, books etc are in his safe and will stay there till he gets ready to bring them out He admitted that he had on hand money collected belonging to the town, but not all that was due on the tax levy.

The Catholic Total Abstinence Union

BOSTON, Aug 1 The 18th annual convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America met in Fremont Temple this morning, Father P J Cosgrove, of Worcester, presiding After organization the delegates proceeded to St James church where high mass was celebrated A sermon was preached by Rev Morgan M Sheady, of Pittsburg Pa, who spoke chiefly upon the cultivation of temperance among the growing generation of the country

The General Secretary's report showed that the present membership of the order is 11,755, enrolled in 79 societies, being a gain of about 2,800 members during the year Vicar General Byrne and ex-President O'Donnell addressed the convention briefly The credentials committee reported 79 delegates present and the convention then took a recess until 2 30

The Afternoon Session of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union opened at 3 P M A letter was read from Pope Leo XIII replying to the jubilee address He expressed gratitude for the love and devotion of the Union and hoped for extensive organization He also sent his blessing A message of congratulation was sent to the Pope Letters were received from Cardinal Gibbons Archbishops Ryan, O Brien, Ireland and many others A committee was announced to make arrangements for the observance of the birth of Father Matthew Rev Walter Elliot, of New York, stated that there should be liberty of person and religion, but no liberty to saloon keepers Rev Thaddeus Hogan, of New Jersey, denounced Father Elliot's ideas as unchristian, saying selling liquor was not wrong, but those who abused the sale should be criticised and the saloon keeper to whom the sacraments were administered every Sunday should not be denounced

A vote of thanks was refused Elliot and Hogan and an excited running debate ensued The convention adjourned till to-morrow at 9 A M

ASSAULT CASE

Waiting the Result of the Injuries

FALMOUTH, Mass, Aug 1 Frank McKeon, who is charged with assaulting Daniel Holden, in Wales recently, was arrested to day by Deputy Sheriff Healy and conveyed to this place, where he was given a preliminary hearing in the District Court The case was continued until the 10th instant to await the result of Holden's injuries, which it is expected will be death Then another warrant will be issued, charging the assailant with manslaughter The prisoner was remanded to custody in default of $1,000 bonds

A WRITTEN NATURE The Belfast Journal says For years it has been claimed by the enthusiastic lovers of Penobscot Bay scenery that it was the second in beauty to the far famed Bay of Naples, and now we are to have a veritable city of Naples upon the shores of our Bay, but six miles distant from and in full sight of Belfast. A company of Boston and Bangor capitalists have recently bought ninety acres of land on the western side of Islesboro, and near Turtle Head, and have laid it out with streets, avenues, parks, etc. The land lies along the shore of what is known as Marshall's Cove, just south of Turtle Head, and the location is one of the best for a summer resort to be found on the coast of Maine the harbor a deep and well sheltered, while it is but a short distance out of the track of vessels passing the head either from Belfast or Bangor. The plan of Naples was surveyed and planned by R. P Farrow, Esq., of East Belmont, is now on file at the Registry of Deeds and shows the place to be neatly and conscientiously laid out The owners will at once begin to develop the property.

NINTH MAINE REGIMENT REUNION. The members of the Ninth Maine Regiment which holds its reunion in this city, August 30th, are making preparations for a grand time on that occasion This regiment lay under fire twenty eight and day for over three months; it participated in the siege of Port Royal, South Carolina, Fort Gilmore, Florida, was in charge of Fort Wagner, and in nearly every battle of the Second Division of the Tenth Army Corps. Capt. Cont. Brooks, of New Haven, Conn., president of the association, writes Comrade Harper, of Lewiston, to assure the boys that no pains will be spared to make this one of the best reunions that the regiment ever had, and to tell all the [illegible] to be on hand. A Large Expenditure, which will Bring No Return.

Candidate Putnam Speaks of Tariff but not of Fisheries.

"The day is past and gone," the great day, which has been announced with such a flourish of trumpets, when the Democracy of Eastern Maine were going to rise in their majesty and show by their presence at the "great barbecue" that the people of Maine were in favor of adding to the retention of that party in power which is doing its utmost to strike a deadly blow at the interests of the country, the interests of the State of Maine and the interests of the laboring man the day came and a more beautiful one never dawned on our State and so far as the weather was concerned there was nothing to mar the most perfect success of the occasion

It was expected, from the great promises which had been made and the great inducements which had been held forth, that with the earliest light of dawn people from all the surrounding country would come pouring in by means of the various avenues leading into the city But the morning came, the forenoon passed and the sun had marked high meridian but still the multitude did not pour in In fact our streets have seen no more quiet an aspect as any day during the summer Shortly after noon the train from Presque Isle arrived bringing upon it some two hundred and fifty people, gathered from the entire length of the line, including men, women and children to whom low fares had offered a pleasant excursion to the city

They were accompanied by Dyer's Band of Dover which marched from the station at the foot of Exchange street, up through the city to the headquarters, the excursionists having scattered far and near on their errands of business or pleasure The next arrival was by the noon train on the Maine Central, bringing Hill's Band of Exeter and the Corinna Band The one were two organizations with them but a fair number of visitors like those by the Piscataquis and soon following these came the large Guilford, from down river, with the Lincolnville Band, which had eighteen followers, and marched from the boat and the Winterport Band with 20 followers Some attention was attracted to the sound of music coming down Hammond street and turning up Main street, which proved to be Dyer's Band, escorting a team drawn by four horses, and upon which surrounded by evergreen trees, was the carcass of the "fatted ox" which had been offered for sacrifice

At one o'clock the Ellsworth club came by cars, numbering fifty men with drum corps, and shortly afterwards the Maine Central "Flying Yankee" train brought the Danforth club with sixty seven men, both of which organizations were received and escorted to the Park by the Bangor club numbering forty-six men, headed by the Bangor Band This completed the total arrival of organizations previous to the arrival of the evening trains from the west Meanwhile a force of men had been busy in the large room under the grand stand at the Park in setting the tables the success in cooking which had been better than had been feared, and making sandwiches, with which, together with baked beans, coffee, etc., a dinner was provided and served to the hungry and thirsty

At three o'clock the assemblage, numbering from four thousand to five thousand, was called to order by Hon I P Bass, from a speaker's stand which had been erected in front of the grand stand, who called Hon. A M Robinson to the chair for a temporary meeting to precede the arrival of Hon William L Putnam, who was to deliver the address of the occasion Mr Robinson called first upon Henry Hudson, Esq, of Guilford, and then upon Mr Charles E Allen, of Dresden both of whom spoke upon the tariff question Mr Allen is a man who claims to "know it all," and undertook to show how much worse off our State is under protection than it was in the good old days of Democracy and low tariff He is an easy speaker but his argument was very specious and poor, and in a joint debate with one at all acquainted with the question he would be shown up in a very poor light After he had finished the band played a selection and then, there being no other speaker, Mr Allen got up and said some more

At quarter past four o'clock

with several other prominent Democrats and was escorted to the speaker's stand and Mr Bass again called the meeting to order and introduced Wm T Pearson Esq., as chairman

In brief introductory remarks Mr Pearson presented, as the speaker of the day, Hon. William L Putnam, of Portland, whom he styled as "the next Governor of Maine" Mr. Putnam was received with loud applause and commenced his speech with a very humorous and complimentary allusion to the city of Bangor, referring to its reputation for large hearted and generous hospitality Then drawing a large number of papers from his pocket he proceeded, as he would to addressing the bench of judges, to argue the case of the tariff question from the standpoint of the Mills bill. At one time he so far forgot that he was not in court that he began "May it please the —" but quickly corrected himself and attempted to show that the Democratic party, in demanding tariff for revenue only, was more in consonance with the spirit of the constitution than the Republican party, which demands a tariff for protection to our industries on unimportant to his auditors that their number rapidly thinned away, and there were not half as many present at the end of the thirty minutes during which he spoke as when he began. A large portion of his speech was devoted to reading from the various papers which he held in his hand. He said there were only two important Maine industries, directly affected by the Mills bill, namely lumber and wool, and that Maine did not depend upon Medicine for Throat and Lung Diseases has long been and still is, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It cures Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and Asthma; soothes Irritation of the Larynx and Fauces; strengthens the Vocal Organs; allays soreness of the Lungs; prevents Consumption, and, even in advanced stages of that disease, relieves Coughing and induces Sleep. There is no other preparation for diseases of the throat and lungs to be compared with this one.

"My wife had a distressing cough, with pain in the side, and became so low that we thought she must lose her by good until I got a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral which has cured her. A neighbor, Mrs. Orbison, had the trouble and the cough, was relieved by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I have no hesitation in recommending this to persons afflicted." Robert Horton, Foreman Herald office, Carrollton, Ark.

"I have been afflicted with asthma for forty years, and last spring I was taken with a violent cough which threatened to terminate in phthisis. Every one pronounced me in consumption. I decided to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. The first bottle gave me relief, and I continued until I had taken half a dozen bottles, when I was entirely cured." J. Bullard, Guilford, Conn.

"For a long time I had a severe hemorrhage of the lungs brought on by an incurable cough which I believed one of deep and rest. I tried various remedies but found no relief until I began to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Its effects were immediate, and I continued until entirely cured." Mrs. P. Coburn, 13 Somerset St., Lowell, Mass.

For children affected with colds, croup, or any form of throat or lung disease, I can confidently give Ayer's Cherry Pectoral the preference over all other medicines." Rev. J. Wheeling Crabb, Pastor of Wheeling Creek Church, Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

THE TWINS

By THOMAS HARDY.

I.

It was often said and oftener surmised that Baptista Trewthen was a young woman with scarcely emotions or character. There was nothing in her to love and nothing to hate—so ran the general opinion. That she showed few positive qualities was true. The colors and tones which changing events palm on fragrant active womanhood were looked for in vain upon her. But still waters only run deep, and no could had come to the peace of her only neighbored to demonstrate what lay hidden within her, like metal in a mine.

She was the daughter of a small farmer in St. Mary's, one of the Scilly Isles, who had spent a large sum, as it was there understood, on her education, by sending her to the mainland for two years. At 19 she was entered at the Truthing College for Elementary Teachers, and at 21 nominated to a school in the country, near Exeter, whither she proceeded after the Christmas examination and holidays.

The months passed by from winter to spring and summer, and Baptista applied herself to her new duties as best she could, till an uneventful year had elapsed. Then an air of obstruction pervaded her bearing as she walked to and fro, twice a day, and she showed the traits of a person who had something on her mind. A widow, by name Mrs. Wace, in whose house Baptista Trewthen had been provided with a sitting room and bedroom till the school house should be built, noticed this change in her peaceful tenant's manner and at last ventured to press her with a few questions.

"It has nothing to do with the place, nor with you," said Miss Trewthen.

"Then it is the salary?"

"No, nor the salary."

"Then is it something you have heard from home, my dear?" Baptista was silent for a few moments. "It is Mr Heddegan," she murmured. "I am they used to call David Heddegan before he got his money."

"And who is the Mr Heddegan they used to call David?"

"An old bachelor at Hugh Town St. Mary's, with no relations whatever, who lives about a stones throw from father's. When I was a child he used to take me on his knee and say he'd marry me some day. Now I am a woman the jest has turned earnest, and he is anxious to do it. And father and mother says I can't do better than have him."

"He's well off?"

"Yes—he's the richest man we know—as a friend and neighbor."

"How much older did you say he was than yourself?"

"I didn't say. Twenty years at least."

"And an unpleasant man in the bargain, perhaps?"

"No, he's not unpleasant."

"Well child, all I can say is that I'd resist any such engagement if it's not palatable to you. You are comfortable here, in my little house, I hope. All the parish like you, and I've never been so cheerful since my husband left me to want he wings as I've been with you my lodger."

The school mistress assured her landlady that she could return the sentiment. "But have you any popularity?" she said. "I don't like keeping a school. As you are surprised—you didn't suspect it. That's because I've concealed my feeling. Well, I simply hate school. I don't care for children—they are unpleasant, troublesome little things, whom nothing would delight so much as to hear that they had fallen down dead. Yet I would even put up with them if it was not for the inspector. For three months before his visit I didn't sleep soundly. And the committee of council are always changing the code, so that you don't know what to teach and what to leave untaught. I think father and mother are right. They say I shall never excel as a school mistress if I dislike the work so, and that therefore I ought to get settled by marrying Mr Heddegan. Between us two, I like him better than school, but I don't like him quite so much as to wish to marry him."

These conversations, once begun, were continued from day to day, till at length the young girl's elderly friend and landlady threw in her opinion on the side of Miss Trewthen's parents. All things considered, she declared, the uncertainty of the school, the labor Baptista's natural dislike for teaching, it would be as well to take what fate offered and make the best of matters by wedding her father's old neighbor and prosperous friend.

The Easter holidays came round, and Baptista went to spend them as usual in her native isle, going by train as far as she could and crossing by packet from Penzance. When she returned in the middle of April her face wore a more settled aspect.

"Well?" said the expectant Mrs. Wace.

"I have agreed to have him as my husband, said Baptista, in an off hand way. "Heaven knows if it will be for the best or not. But I have agreed to do it, and so the matter is settled."

Mrs. Wace commended her, but Baptista did not care to dwell on the subject, so that allusion to it was very infrequent between them. Nevertheless, among other things, she repeated to the widow from time to time in monosyllabic remarks that the wedding was really impending. Until it was arranged for the summer, and that she had given notice of leaving the school at the August holidays. Later on she announced more specifically that her marriage was to take place immediately after her return home all the beginning of the month afore said.

She now corresponded regularly with Mr Heddegan. Her letters from him were seen, at least on the outside and in part within, by Mrs. Wace. Had she read more of their interiors than the occasional sentences shown by Baptista she would have perceived that a marked tipsy handwriting of Miss Trewthen's betrothed conveyed little more nearer their details of their future housekeeping and his preparation for the same, with numerous "my dears" sprinkled in discriminately, to show the depth of his affection without the inconvenience of syntax.

II.

It was the end of July—dry, too dry, even for the season, the delicate green herbs and vegetables that grew in the favored isle of the kingdom lacking rather of the watering pot than of the pure fresh moisture from the skies. Baptista's boxes were packed, and one Saturday morning she departed by a wagonette to the station and thence by rails to Penzance, from which port she was, as usual, to cross the water immediately to her home and become Mr Heddegan's wife on the Wednesday of the week following.

She might have returned a week sooner. But though the wedding day had loomed so near and the banns were out, she delayed her departure till the last moment, saying it was not necessary for her to be home long beforehand. As Mr Heddegan was older than herself, she said, she was to be married in her ordinary summer bonnet and gray silk frock, and there was no proportionate to make that had not been amply made by her parents and intended husband.

In due time, after a hot and tedious journey she reached Penzance. She here obtained some refreshment and then went toward the pier, where she learned, to her surprise, that the little steamboat plying between the town and the islands had left at 11 o'clock, the usual hour of departure in the afternoon having been forestalled in consequence of the fogs which had for a few days prevailed toward evening, making twilight navigation dangerous.

This being Saturday, there was now no other boat till Tuesday, and it became obvious that here she would have to remain for the three days unless her friends should think fit to rig out one of the island sailing boats and come to fetch her—a not very likely contingency, the sea distance being nearly forty miles.

Baptista, however, had been detained in Penzance on more than one occasion before, either on account of bad weather to cross such waters or the contrary, and she was therefore not in any paternal alarm. But, as she was to be married on the following Wednesday, the delay was certainly inconvenient. As it was it then appeared that she would have but time a day's interval between her arrival and the wedding ceremony.

Apart from the inconvenience, she did not much mind the accident. It was indeed curious to her little she minded. Perhaps it could not be but that, to say that, affection she was called for in the middle.

The question now was, should she return again to Mrs. Wace, in the Devonshire village, or wait in the town at which she had arrived? She would have preferred to go back but the distance was too great; moreover, having left the place for good, and somewhat dramatically, to become a bride, a return, even for so short a space, would have been a little humiliating.

Leaving, then, her boxes at the station, her best journey was to secure a respectable or rather genteel lodging in the popular seaside resort confronting her. To this end she looked about the town, in which, though she had passed through it half a dozen times, she was practically a stranger.

Baptista found a room, to suit her over a fruiterer's shop, where she made herself at home and set herself in order after her journey. An early cup of tea having revived her spirits she walked out to reconnoiter.

Being a school mistress she avoided looking at the schools, and having a sort of trade connection with books she avoided looking at the booksellers; but worrying of the shops she inspected the dishes and set that for her part the royal month about ecclesiastical edifices, but tourists looked at them, and so would she—a proceeding for which no one would have credited her with any great originality, such, for instance, as that she subsequently showed herself to possess. The churches soon oppressed her. St Mary's was neither old nor new, St Paul's was quite new, and she could find no others.

Yet the town and the walks in this land of strawberries, cream, headquarters of early English flowers and fruit, were then, as always, attractive. From the more picturesque walks she went to Harbour street and the pier and the harbor, and looked at the men at work there, tarring and unloading as in the time of the Phoenicians.

"Not Baptista? Yes, Baptista it is!"

The words were uttered behind her. Turning round, she gave a start and became confused, even agitated, for a moment. Then she said in her usual, undemonstrative manner "Oh is it really you, Charles?"

Without speaking again at all, and with a half smile, the speaker glanced her over. There was much crinkled and some resentment, even temper, in his eye.

"I am going home," continued she. "But I have missed the boat."

He scarcely seemed to take in the meaning of this explanation in the intensity of his critical survey. "Teaching still! What a fine school mistress you make, Baptista, I warrant!" he said, with a slight flavor of sarcasm which was not lost upon her.

"I know I'm nothing to brag of," she replied; "That's why I have given up."

"Oh—given up! You astonish me."

"I hate the profession."

"Perhaps that's because I am in it."

"Oh, no, it isn't. But I am going to enter on another life altogether. I am going to be married next week to Mr David Heddegan."

The young man, fortified as he was by a natural cynical pride and pusillanimous, winced at the unexpected reply, notwithstanding.

"Who is Mr David Heddegan?" he asked, as indifferently as lay in his power.

She informed him that the bearer of the name was a general merchant of Hugh Town St Mary's Island—her father's nearest neighbor and oldest friend.

"Then we shall see anything more of you on the mainland" inquired the school master.

"Oh, I don't know about that," said Miss Trewthen.

"Here endeth the career of the belle of the boarding school your father was foolish enough to send you to. A general merchant's wife in Scilly. Will you sell pounds of soap and penny worths of tin tacks, or whole bars of monosyllabic matter and great tenpenny nails?"

ARRESTED 151 TIMES.

Not long ago a man was before a New York judge, who asserted he had been arrested 151 times. We believe there is one disturber of society who has broken this record. We refer to the insidious disease consumption, which, when taken in time, is always arrested by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It has an unparalleled record as a cure for coughs, colds, and all forms of pulmonary diseases. It is a reliable tonic and alterative, or blood-purifier, to be found at every drug store, and should be kept in every house. d&w1w July21

Ayer's Cathartic Pills are recommended by the best physicians, because they are free from calomel and other injurious drugs, being compound of purely vegetable ingredients. While thorough in their action, they stimulate and strengthen the bowels and secretory organs. July20 d&w1w

Catarrh is a common disease, so common that sneezing and "hawking" reach you at every turn. Your foot slips in his nasty discharge, in the omnibus or in church, and he snooze fragments at the lecture or concert. The proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy offer $500 reward for a case of Catarrh which they cannot cure. Remedy sold by druggists, at 50 cents. d&w1w July21

A GOOD APPETITE

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Are you weak and weary, overworked and tired? Hood's Sarsaparilla is just the medicine to purify your blood and give you strength.

TRUTH IS TOUGH

Does not Mr. Bryant say that "Truth will get well its train over by a locomotive, while error dies of lockjaw if she scratches her finger." The truth about Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets will be found hard to suppress. All who take them find them gentle in their action but true in their work. Don't be afraid of mercury or anything harmful in them. They are purely vegetable and perfectly harmless. No use of taking the huge, repulsive, nauseous pills. These Pellets (Little Liver Pills) are scarcely larger than mustard seeds. They cure Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Dizziness, Constipation, Indigestion, and Bilious Attacks. 25 cents a vial, by druggists. d&ewlw July21
